Discipline vs Punishment

DISCIPLINE

VERSUS

PUNISHMENT

Helps children learn by teaching them how to make good choices and about the results of their behavior.

Reassures a child that he remains lovable, even when he makes poor choices or mistakes.

Encourages good behavior, which keeps the lines of communication open between parent and child and fosters connection.

Focuses on the child controlling his/her own behavior.

Relies on fear and suffering to get kids to comply and learn a lesson.

Emphasis is on the child being “bad” rather than the behavior. This becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy and misbehavior continues.

Fosters rebellion, revenge, dishonesty and disconnection between parent and child.

Focuses on the parent being responsible for controlling a child’s behavior.
